Weekly Reflections...

How are you doing?

This season invites us to get together with friends, perhaps for a walk on the beach or cold drinks on the porch or whatever gives us space and time to relax together. In that very precious, quiet, alone time with a close friend, the routine question "How are you doing?" can invite a deeper response. The caring presence of someone who will not change the subject, interrupt or hurry the conversation encourages us to open up. Perhaps we sense the stirring of something new within us— an idea, desire, intention, anxiety, hope – that wants to be spoken out loud. Friendship provides a safe space for the sharing of this new thing within. It can seem more real when we can look at it together and consider what it may mean.

In the parable of the mustard seed, Jesus points out that even the tiniest seed can result in big bushes; faith that starts small can move mountains! It can be challenging for mustard seeds and faith alike to set down roots and push green shoots above the ground. The physical seed needs the right conditions – soil, nutrients, water, and sun at least. For us humans, our needs are much more complex if we are to grow and prosper – ask any parent!

It happens sometimes that the new stirring within has to do with faith or with our relationship with God. It may come quietly, like a whisper that persists. It may come in the midst of a crisis – a sudden loss that turns life upside down. It may be the slow, steady growth of a yearning that has always been there. It can be difficult to speak of the spiritual stirrings that arise in us with friends and family. It is then that a spiritual friend or companion can be a real gift.

The need for spiritual companionship is so basic that Christians recognized it early on. It used to be available mostly to the "professionally" religious – priests and religious who still use it routinely. Now, however, such spiritual friendship is open to any who wish it and our own parish has long fostered a ministry of spiritual direction. Should you choose to seek out a spiritual director - really more of a friend – you are likely to hear the question, "How are things going with you and God?" Names and numbers for four certified spiritual directors are in the Bulletin every Sunday. The invitation is open – come, sit, and we'll talk.

In friendship,
Kathy Egan, Spiritual Director
